DETAILED ACTION

Specification

1. The disclosure is objected to because of the following informalities: the missing serial numbers noted on page 1 should be added.

Appropriate correction is required.

Applicant's cooperation is requested in correcting any errors of which applicant may become aware in the specification.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

3. Claims 1-13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being clearly anticipated by Horvitz, U.S. 6,085,226.

Horvitz teaches the claimed invention including a web browser that automatically prefetches web documents linked to a currently displayed web page based on keywords, terms in the displayed document and/or hyperlinks contained in the document, based on a flexibly predictive algorithm, such that when a user wishes to view one of these documents, in can be viewed without download delay. Note, e.g., the Summary of the Invention.

Columns 37-39 explain how links contained in the currently viewed webpage may be used to predict which other documents to prefetch. Note also Figure 14.

As for the use of specially highlighted links, e.g., "fast links", this would have been within the scope of the display of the given URL in the "favorites" section of the browser (note column 40).
